Dear Colleagues:

Welcome to New York City! It's been quite a while since the Forum gathered in the "Big Apple" and we are delighted to be back! In keeping with our focus on increasing the value of the Forum to our in-house counsel colleagues, we are pleased to present an outstanding program: "In-House Counsel Summit: Shining a Light on the Construction Issues Keeping In-House Counsel Up at Night."

In-house lawyers wear many hats and provide substantive advice on a myriad of complex legal issues affecting their entities, particularly in the construction industry. They advise executive leadership, support project teams performing high-stakes construction projects in multiple jurisdictions, draft and negotiate a variety of agreements, and mitigate risk – all while advancing the company's business objectives. This program examines what it takes for construction industry in-house counsel to be successful in the various roles in which they serve and to provide outside counsel insight into how to best support their client's in-house legal team. Among other things, attendees will gain a better understanding of how to:

- Strike a balance between risk mitigation and business objectives in order to meet the expectations of the C-suite executive team;
- Draft and negotiate ancillary agreements to address unique issues that arise on construction projects;
- Address critical employment issues in the construction industry;
- Prepare clients to address the ever-growing threat of cybercrime;
- Understand the legal implications of emerging construction technologies;
- Avoid pitfalls for the unwary on P3 projects while understanding how P3 projects are conceived, developed, and delivered; and
- Examine the ethical risks of practicing law remotely, as well as other "lessons learned" from the COVID-19 pandemic

New in-house counsel will not want to miss a special opportunity to attend a unique training practicum featuring seasoned in-house construction lawyers who will discuss the tools necessary for in-house success. Additionally, attendees will gain valuable insight into how to allocate and manage project risks, effectively handle lost productivity, and delay issues during the project, protect rights to project payment and performance in the bankruptcy context, and so much more. We are also excited to offer a special conversation with the Honorable Shira A. Scheindlin, known to many construction lawyers as the judge who "wrote the book" on electronic discovery through her insightful, and critically important decisions.

In its 45 years of existence, the Forum has become more than just the largest organization of construction lawyers in the world. Its consistent excellence in building the best construction lawyers through programs, publications, and people, has resulted in recognition as a highly regarded resource to the entire construction industry. Accordingly, we are thrilled to celebrate this special milestone of excellence at a formal "black-tie" gala event!

In addition to the bright lights of Times Square, the thrill of Broadway shows, the amazing food scene, and the endless list of exciting things New York City has to offer, be sure to join Forum colleagues for a fun-run/walking tour in Central Park to benefit Building For Good!

Start spreading the news — the Forum is back in New York City!!!

PROGRAM SCHEDULE

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4

1:00 – 2:45 P.M.

Practicum: It Takes Two to Tango – A Primer for New In-House Lawyers (Part I)

The role of in-house counsel, and the relationship between attorney and client, is very different from private practice and the transition from one role to another is often challenging. During the first half of our practicum, our panel will provide information and insight regarding the transition from private practice to an in-house position, tips for creating an in-house legal role, and advice for balancing the in-house lawyer's responsibility for compliance with building a partnership with the executive team. The panelists will also address the in-house lawyer's role in defining, administering and enforcing a compliance program, as well as the role of ethics in compliance.

Practicum: It Takes Two to Tango – A Primer for New In-House Lawyers (Part II)

During the second half of the session, attendees will learn about advising clients on risk management and safety, supporting project teams and mitigating claims, tips for handling labor and employment issues, insurance, and strategic business planning. The panel will also address how to create and execute an internal training program. Finally, when claims can't be avoided, in-house lawyers typically take the lead in managing the dispute and retaining outside counsel. The panel will offer insight and advice regarding the role of outside counsel, early case assessment, establishing a strategy, creating and managing a budget, how to establish a reporting process and managing the business team's expectations.

Sleepless in the C-Suite: Counsel's Guide to Meeting Executive Team Expectations

In-house construction counsel address a variety of legal issues and must effectively strike a balance between risk mitigation and business objectives. Construction executives discuss what they expect from in-house lawyers, things that make in-house lawyers shine, and how in-house lawyers add value to the project team. They will review how counsel can help executives avoid unintentionally subjecting themselves (or their entities) to civil or criminal liability in certain circumstances. Outside counsel will get a glimpse of the internal pressures faced by in-house lawyers and learn how they can be more valuable to their clients.

9:45 – 10:45 A.M. Plenary 2 Avoiding the Cyber Nightmare: The Lawyers' Role in Preparing their Clients for Cyber Risk

Some say there are two types of companies – those that have been hacked and those that will be hacked. This risk is particularly acute for construction industry entities because they regularly possess or have access to commercially sensitive data, often owned by third parties. Most data breaches arise from human error or system glitches – not cybercriminals. This panel will offer recommendations to in-house lawyers for preparing their companies to avoid and address cyber risks. They will review the risks of civil and criminal liability stemming from data breaches, best practices for prevention, and strategies for an effective response. They will also examine cyber insurance options and ways to maximize coverage.

10:55 – 11:55 A.M. Plenary 3 Sweet Dreams (Are Made of . . . Good Contracts): Understanding and Navigating the Ancillary Contracts in Construction

In-house counsel frequently draft and negotiate core construction contracts, but projects often require a variety of other specialized ancillary agreements, including joint venture arrangements, special project access issues, non-disclosure and confidentiality, unusual project finance, letters of intent and other issues. You can sleep soundly when you have adequately papered the deal for these critical, and often unique, situations. This session will equip counsel to recognize the need for an ancillary agreement as well as the purposes, principal components, and strategies for negotiating such specialized contracts.

Solve the Problem! Practical Recommendations for Effective Dispute Resolution Through Mediation and Arbitration

Mediation can be an effective way to resolve construction disputes. Increasingly, however, parties treat mediation as the first opportunity to meaningfully address the key disputed issues, often resulting in an impasse, followed by arbitration or litigation. Based upon a survey of hundreds of construction law practitioners, this plenary offers concrete recommendations regarding mediator preferences, mediation timing, pre-mediation preparation and communication, mediation structure, and post-mediation communication. Our panelists will also present an analysis of a survey of more than 200 construction arbitrators concerning their practices and preferences, including persuasive advocacy techniques in construction arbitration and how to present your case most effectively and efficiently.

Wake Me Up Before It's Over: Managing and Preserving Claims for Lost Productivity and Delay During the Project

We often talk about how to handle lost productivity and delay claims once they are in litigation, but what should counsel be mindful of during the project? How can we assure that the project team consults in-house counsel before it's too late? What should in-house counsel do when the problem arises, but before an outside lawyer or expert is hired? Our panel will share their advice for working with project teams during problem projects to recognize and document potential impacts, minimize disruptions, utilize experts, manage claims for lost productivity and delays, and avoid dangerous pitfalls in the process.

10:15 – 11:05 A.M. A Conversation with the Hon. Shira A. Scheindlin

The Forum’s Diversity and Inclusion Committee is honored to present a conversation with the Hon. Shira A. Scheindlin. Judge Scheindlin was appointed by President Bill Clinton as a federal judge of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York and served for 22 years. During that time, she presided over numerous criminal and civil cases. Among many important cases, her opinions on electronic case management are recognized as case law landmarks. Judge Scheindlin now serves as an arbitrator, mediator, expert witness, and special master. She also conducts neutral evaluations, mock trials and arguments. Diversity and inclusion have been critically important to Judge Scheindlin throughout her career. She has been a leading agent for change in courtroom advocacy by women and minorities. She is a member of the College of Commercial Arbitrators (CCA), and on the panels of the AAA, ICDR, FedArb and CPR. She is the Co-Chair of CPR’s Diversity in ADR Task Force and a member of the CCA’s Diversity Committee. She is also Co-chair of the New York State Bar Association’s Task Force on Women’s Initiatives. Judge Scheindlin serves as the Co-Chair of the Board of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights under Law, and as a member of the Board of the American Constitution Society, the Bronx Defenders and the Justice Resource Center.

11:15 – 12:15 P.M. Workshop A Is This a Bad Dream? Protecting Your Client’s Right to Payment and Performance in the Bankruptcy Context

This session examines the tools project participants can use to protect their right to be paid, assure timely completion of performance obligations, or obtain redress when a debtor files (or is expected to file) bankruptcy. Are contract provisions helpful? What early action can be taken to better position your client for recovery? How does bankruptcy impact the ability to perfect a lien, make a payment bond claim, terminate a defaulting entity, or pursue a performance bond surety? What can (or can't) be included in demand letters? What are the options for completing the debtor's work? How can relief from the automatic stay be obtained? The speakers will provide practical tips for successfully navigating the project maze when bankruptcy is on the horizon.

11:15 – 12:15 P.M. Workshop B Don’t Fall Asleep at the Switch: Surviving and Thriving in International Construction Markets

When your client is performing outside the United States, in-house counsel has an important role in making sure the company does not run afoul of either US laws (such as the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act) or laws in the jurisdiction where the work is performed. This session identifies critical things counsel must know to prepare and protect their clients on international projects. Topics include establishing and managing an effective compliance program, the impact of cultural business practices on a project, and other issues that may not be readily apparent to the uninitiated.

12:20 – 1:20 P.M. Plenary 10 If You Snooze, You Lose: What Attorneys Must Know About the Risks of Practicing Law Remotely

The recent pandemic required many attorneys to practice remotely and some will continue to do so even after the pandemic ends. This session will help you understand how to practice remotely without inadvertently committing the unauthorized practice of law. Attendees will learn the difference between the virtual practice of law and telecommuting – and why it matters. Understand which ethics rules and opinions impact the remote practice of law, including ABA Model Rule 5.5, exceptions to the unauthorized practice of law, recent ABA Formal Opinion 495, and other related ethical issues.
